MASKERS WIN PRIZES

Annual Turnverein Ball a Scene of Splendor.

COSTUMES DELIGHT

Old Masonic Hall Rings with Plaudtts of Audience at Grotesque Frolics of Masqueraders - Gorgeous nounce Prize Winners at Close.

Scenes of splendor, intermingled with grotesqueness and accompanied by the frolics of merrymakers, were features of the grand fancy costume ball and masquerade of the Columbia Turnverein, held at the old Masonic Temple last night. Seldom has there been a ball of this kind given in Washington, at which there were more fancy masks, and at which the mummers made a greater effort to entertain the audience

Gayety of Color.

Long before the curtain rose, which disclosed to the visitors a gorgeous stage setting, peopled with all sorts of fancy costumes, the hall was crowded with maskers of every description. There were monks, Indians, Mexicans, Spanish fiddlers, old maids, Carrie Nation, Jew clowns, students, Pierettes, princes, knights, bandits, and hoboes, Germania and Uncle Sam devils and others, flower girls and Turklen beauties, peasant girls, old maids, colonial dames and Revolutionary daughters and queen of the night, and other comical and beau tiful make-ups

At a signal given by the master of ceremonies, Prof. Duehring, the maskers on the stage, to the sounds of a grand march, gracefully stepped down and marched and counter-marched, and went through graceful figure-forming and ran riot with grace of movement. Again, began, the other maskers joining.

At 10:30 o'clock the grand march, headed by members of the various committees, began. At its conclusion the maskers as-

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

New National next week with a cast of

No words can do justice to this scenic and musical whirlwind of fun, the magnitude of which has caused astonishment wherever it has been presented. "Little Neme," while a novelty in point of scenic investiture and filled with beautiful stage pictures, still has a clearly defined plot. This is, indeed, so strong as to constitute a story, the development of which is watched by the audience with the closest Stage Setting-The Committees An- attention. In addition to this unusual feature, there is enough laughter-bringing matter in the performance to stock three or four ordinary musical comedies and then have some left over.

"Little Nemo" has cost its producers over $100,000, but the money has been carefully spent and no detail overlooked, the result being that from the rise to the fall of the curtain the audience is constantly receiving some fresh and beautiful surprise. In "Little Nemo" it is the unexpected that always happens.

Belasco-"The Turning Point." Preston Gibson's latest play, "The Turning Point," will be offered at the Belasco Theater the week of March 14. The play is modern, vital, and convincing. The story is told in three acts, and contains several exciting situations, which should hold the audience in great tension, and throughout there is a vein of humorous and delightful comedy. Rehearsals are now in progress at the Maxine Elliott Theater, New York. The cast is a notable one, including Miss Grace Filkins, Cuyler Hastings, Josephine Victor, Charles Gotthold, Charlotte Ives, Amelia Mayborn, Edward See, and James Elikwood.

He was singularly gifted; and his teacher was uplifted by the frequent contemplation of the genius he displayed; in the calm abode of learning there were children vainly yearning for a chance to shine beside him, but he made their efforts fade. He was great on composition, showing wondrous erudition, for a lad of fourteen summers, and the lovely things he penned, stirred up all the village sages, and they said that future ages would be dwelling on the glory of their gifted youthful friend. "As a speaker he's a wonder and we love to hear him thunder forth the burning words of Homer as they Englished were by Pope; he'll advance by hasty stages," said the good village sages, "till he hits the highest places-we are handing out straight dope." Did that shining youthful wonder rip a gasping world asunder, when he left the home of learning for the busy haunts of men? KRAMER'S

FUNERAL DESIGNS Are the Choicest That Are Made

Kramer's funeral designs are made right in Kramer's own Funeral Department from flowers grown by Kramer. What this means in originality of conception and skillful execution only those who have seen the beautiful effects produced by Kramer can properly appreciate.

Kramer's Funeral Department is the largest in the country, and the service it supplies is just as complete and extensive as its size. Special designs are made up at exceptionally short notice and shipped to any point desired within a radius of 500 miles.

Growing his own flowers enables Kramer to produce artistic and beautiful effects at a very moderate cost, affording patrons substantial savings on every design they order.
